

Elena is a recent graduate of the George Washington University law school and a graduate of Yale University. She has studied international human rights at Oxford University, and business and business law at Instituto de Empresa.

She clerks at the American Bar Association Center for Human Rights, where she works on vision creation and partnership development, as well as research, on a variety of projects with the Center, its Board and its partners, including corporations and law firms, government and NGO's. She also assisted the International Corporate Accountability Roundtable with their shadow Baseline Assessment for the United States National Action Plan, and has consulted in Russia on comparative law and policy, and business strategy.

Elena's skills and interests include international relations, and emotional and cultural intelligence. She is particularly focused on working across disciplines and cultures to develop innovative partnerships and solutions. She is based in Washington, DC and in Moscow, Russia.